THURSDAY EVENING, APRIL 11.

WHAT THE OLD WOMAN SAID.

[From the Baltimore American.] One summer eve I chanced to pass where, by the cottage gate, An aged woman in the town sat crooning to her The frost of age was on her brow, its dimness in her eye, And her bent figure to and fro rocked all unconsciously. The frost of age was on her brow, yet garrulous her tongue, As she compared the "doings now" with those when she was young:

"When I was young, gals were meek, and looked round kind of shy; And when they were compelled to speak, they did so modestly. They stayed at home, and did the work; made Indian bread and wheaten; And only went to singing-school, and sometimes to night meetin'. And children were obedient then; they had no saucy airs;

And minded what their mothers said, and learn ed their hymns and prayers. But now a-days they know enough before they know their letters; And young ones that can hardly walk will contradict their betters. Young women now go kiting round and looking out for beaux; And scarcely one in ten is found who makes or mend her clothes! But then tell my daughter, Folks don't do as they'd ought'er.

"When I was young, if a man had failed, he shut up house and hall, And never ventured out till night, if he ventured out at all; And his wife sold all the china plates, and his sons came home from college; And his gals left school, and learned to wash and bake and such like knowledge; They gave up cake and pumpkin pies and had the plainest eatin';

And never asked folks home to tea, and scarcely went to meetin'. But now-a-days when a merchant fails, they say he makes a penny; The wife don't have a gown the less, and his daughters just as many; His sons they smoke their choice cigars, and drink their costly wine; And she goes to the opera and he has folks to He walks the streets, he drives his gig; men show him all civilities, And what in my day we called debts are now are now his liabilities. They call the man unfortunate who ruins half the city-In my day 'twas creditors to whom we gave our pity. But then tell my daughter, Folks don't do as they'd ought'er."

We have taken the agency of this justly celebrated machine. Housekeepers are particularly requested to call and examine it for themselves, whether desiring to purchase or not By its use the washing of a large family can be done in one fourth of the ordinary time, and with comparatively little or no labor. It is perfectly simple, and not at all liable to get cut of repair. A child is strong enough to work it, and it washes the clothes beautifully, and with not half the wear that they are subjected to in the ordinary way. It will be loaned on trial for one day to parties desiring to purchase.
